

Karin Little, Member

Karin Little is the Chief Strategy Officer for Trellis Education, a nonprofit that is working to ensure every middle and high school student in California has an exceptional STEM teacher. She has over 15 years' experience in launching, developing and growing programs and organizations in the for-profit, non-profit and public education sectors at a regional and national level. Little worked in a number of roles for the San Francisco Unified School District – supporting human capital initiatives, performance management and strategic planning. Little earned a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from Ohio University and a master's degree in business administration from the Fuqua School of Business at Duke University. She has two sons and lives in San Francisco.

